

Corporate Sponsorship

Overview

The Touchdown Shutdown (an expansion of the After-School Sack Attack) is a fundraising initiative to benefit After-School All-Stars (ASAS), and bring more after-school programming to youth nationwide. This NFL season marks the 3rd year of this successful program, which has grown from one player to about a dozen NFL teams. Corporate partners have the unique opportunity to support working families in their communities and gain positive publicity for their involvement. The proceeds directly support ASAS children by bringing them more program options, while expanding programs to more youth in need.

- Each NFL player pledges $100 per tackle or $1,000 per sack for the season, with a $5,000 minimum donation
- Corporate sponsors match player donations by becoming a sponsor
- ASAS manages marketing, publicity, media interviews, site visits, and other opportunities to interact with the kids/players/other sponsors

About After-School All-Stars

Founded by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, After-School All-Stars is one of the largest national organizations that provide comprehensive programming to middle school children in fourteen cities across the country. Through donated funds ASAS has had the opportunity to offer engaging activities to over 72,000 kids annually. The programs are designed to improve the participants' lives by incorporating academic support, enrichment, and health and physical fitness. ASAS, a 501 (C) 3 organization, strives to offer a place to keep children safe and help them achieve in school and in life. With the help of donated dollars, After-School All-Stars aims to give kids a chance to reach their full potential academically, socially and in school.
